Brick and Mortar Home Inspection

Description:

The home inspection is one of the most crucial parts of the home buying process. Many issues identified during the home inspection, if left untreated, can lead to significant costly repairs later, or even unsafe and hazardous living conditions. Offers are finalized or revoked as a result of a home inspector's report. A home inspection can be a source of anxiety for buyers, sellers, and real estate agents. However, real estate agents can ease some of their clients' anxieties by helping them to be better educated and prepared for the home inspection process. This course will identify the most common problem areas in a home inspection and provide real estate agents with tools and strategies they can use to allay their clients' concerns.

THE CASH BUYER CURVEBALL: Why Realtors Must Understand FinCEN

1:00PM - 2:00PM

Cost: FREE

Credits: 1 CE Credit

Instructor: Bettina Arthur

Westcor Land Title Insurance Co

Sponsor: Mary Greenwood

NFM Lending

Description:

With the upcoming implementation of FinCEN's Residential Real Estate Reporting Rule, real estate agents must be prepared for a major shift in how all-cash, entity, and trust-based purchases are handled. While Realtors are not the reporting party under the new rule, their awareness and early preparation are now critical to preventing delays, misunderstandings, and failed closings.

This one-hour course provides real estate professionals with a practical, easy-to-understand overview of the rule, including what constitutes a "reportable transaction," how cash and non-financed deals impact compliance, and what information settlement agents must collect. Agents will learn how to ask the right questions up front, how to prepare buyers and sellers for increased documentation requirements, and how to avoid the common pitfalls that can derail a transaction under the new regulations.

Designed specifically for working agents, this course breaks down FinCEN's requirements into actionable steps, real-world examples, and communication strategies that help ensure smooth contract-to-closing timelines. When agents understand the curveballs that cash buyers can introduce, they can better protect their clients—and their commissions.
